

The Congressional Vote.

Following is the total vote on Congress in this, the 28th district, the figures being the official returns from all the counties:

Table with columns for candidates: Spear, R. Hines, D. Hullings, W. Elk, Forest, Mercer, Venango, Warren.

Hullings plurality over Hines, 622. The vote for Neilly, Prohibitionist, was: Elk 66, Forest 74, Mercer 630, Venango 582, Warren 890; Total, 1,892. For McKown, Socialist, Elk 281, Forest 284, Mercer 1,595, Venango 1,188, Warren 988; Total, 4,097.

The Vote in Forest County.

Judges Aul and Morgan, and Prothonotary Maxwell, with D. W. Clark of the borough and W. C. Brown of Marienville, clerks, met Thursday to count the vote of Forest county at the recent election.

The massive and much misread ballot made it a rather tedious job, but the clerks cleaned up the work in good style in less than twelve hours actual work, and the official table published in the REPUBLICAN this week tells the story of the voting in this county. As will be noted Roosevelt carries the county by a plurality of 348 over Taft, and 215 over Wilson, lacking 25 votes of having a majority over both. His vote was 78 on the Bull Moose ticket, 46 on the Roosevelt Progressive and 464 on the Washington. Combining his vote with that of Taft the Republicans still have nearly two and a half times as many votes as their old competitor, the Democrats, or a majority of 453. Young, who was endorsed by all the Republican elements, has 730 votes against 354 for Berry, Democrat and Keystone candidate for State Treasurer. Practically the same results are noted between the Republican and Democratic candidates for Congress-at-large.

Congressman Spear carried the county over Hullings by 24 plurality, and Hines, Democrat, by 67. It is believed that fully 200 votes were lost by Mr. Spear through fear that in splitting their ticket on the big blanket sheet the voter might lose his vote for President.

Mr. Meehling was high man in the vote getting with 770 to his credit. He was the Republican nominee for Assembly and endorsed by the Washington party. He also sustained considerable loss by reason of the Roosevelt supporters voting in the Bull Moose and Roosevelt Progressive elector columns instead of the Washington, a matter of at least 75 votes, which would have raised his total to 845. William Conger, candidate on the Socialist ticket for Assembly, received 82 more votes this year than he did a year ago when he was a candidate for Sheriff. While the Socialist vote increased somewhat in this county, there was a notable falling off in other parts of the country. Congressman Berger of Milwaukee was defeated for re-election and after March 4 that party will not be represented in Congress. Scatteredly, N. Y., where the party elected the Mayor and a legislator a year ago voted largely Democratic this year. In Massachusetts mill towns the Debs vote was practically only half what it was four years ago.

While Wilson is elected by an overwhelming electoral majority he is woefully beaten on the popular vote, the combined Republican and Roosevelt vote being great enough to carry 32 out of the 48 states with an electoral vote 338, or a majority of 185 in the electoral college.

In Forest county, as in many other sections of the country there was a large percentage of stay-at-homes, a rather strange fact considering the kind of campaign we had. The registration of this county shows 2156. Of this number but 1500 voted, according to the official returns, leaving 656, or more than 25 per cent, who failed to exercise the greatest privilege of an American citizen.

Sound Doctrine.

Although Editor Hendricks, of the Brookville Republican, which supported Roosevelt in the campaign, is of the oratorical rather than the judicial or philosophic temperament, he can, on occasions, indulge in sound reasoning, as the following from this week's issue of the Republican will show:

"In the face of the great Democratic victory of Tuesday it is apparent that there must be a realignment, and the gentlemen who have heretofore been Republicans must get together, but it is an American to presume that the majority must abandon the progressive principles and accept the repudiated standstill doctrine of the minority. The principles are everything. The party name under which they come matters little. We have, however, a sincere regard for the party name 'Republican.' It has a history, and a glorious one, and we prefer to fight the battles of the future under that name. But it must again be made to stand, as it stood in '61, for human rights as against property rights, for progress as against inertia."

It will be an easy matter for intelligent and patriotic Republicans to get together for anything that is for the common good. There was little, if any, real difference of opinion on the vital principles of the campaign just closed. The rank and file of the voters all want clean and unbiased politics. They are all opposed to government being used as the instrument to advance the interests of the few at the expense of the many. They are all in favor of true self-government, and of placing every instrument and facility in the hands of the people to make their will effective.

The difference between Republicans are more imaginary than real. The truth is that all decent men want the same things. It is only when the other fellow states your views that the difference appears great.

There probably never was a campaign in the history of this country in which platforms counted for so little and the personality of the candidates so much. If La Follette, the original progressive, had been the candidate of the Progressive party, he probably would have carried Wisconsin.

guarantee the rights of man and the stability and perpetuity of democratic institutions under the Constitution.

The wide breach in the republican party was not caused by a difference in the attractive qualities of the candidates. If the candidates had been striving for the same object—the election of either one or the other, they could all have stood very comfortably and agreeably on the same platform, and under different circumstances we can all do so again.—Punxsutawney Spirit.

Fake Conservationists.

The following article embraces the statement made by J. Horace McFarland in answer to Engineer Morris Knowles, of Pittsburgh, president of the new fake water conservation association recently organized in Harrisburg for the purpose of grabbing the water powers of the state. Mr. McFarland is in every sense of the word a true conservationist and "speaks by the book," as it were:

"I agree with Mr. Knowles that it is desirable to look in the face the eventual extraction of the coal supply in Pennsylvania and to plan for a proper development of the water powers of the State. I do not agree with him, however, that this ought to be done in the manner being advocated by the so-called Water Conservation association which seems to be an organization primarily formed to secure the repeal of the provisions of the Act of 1905 in respect to the use of the right of eminent domain by water power corporations."

"One needs only to look at the dreadful waste, at the frightful loss of human life, and at the industrial disorder which have followed the unchecked corporate use of the coal supply of the State, to know that in this enlightened time we ought to provide first for the public in the use of any remaining natural resources of importance to all the people."

"I favor a comprehensive survey of the water powers of the State, by State-appointed and State-paid engineers of ability, so that we may know just what resources yet remain to us. I should think it would be a wise thing to so modify the laws as to give to the State Water Supply Commission, in connection with enlarged powers, the right to confer the power of eminent domain upon a water power corporation for a specific purpose and at a specific time—this gift always to be accomplished by safeguarding regulations, which while they should not stand in the least in the way of a perfectly desirable and proper reward to the investors who risk their money, would give to the public some little measure of protection as to votes for power."

"It has been inferred that the water which falls from the sky drops alike upon the just and the unjust, and that therefore it is public property. The laws and the corporations of Pennsylvania, however, have taken good care to interfere with this truism. There has been chartered by the State, according to the last report of the State Water Supply Commission, 1,751 water and water power corporations, of which 851 are yet in active operation. Since this report 24 new water power charters have been granted in the State."

"Over the navigable streams the United States exercises a quasi control. Over the small streams the riparian owners have a control, and about all the water that is left for an unprotected and undefended public is that which falls on an umbrella one may hold over his head, and then it belongs to him only while it is on the umbrella, and not after it falls to the ground."

"Notwithstanding my high regard for the engineering ability of Mr. Knowles, the president of the so-called Water Conservation Association, I cannot feel that he is acting in this matter in any other capacity than that of a paid attorney of the water power corporations which seek first to obtain an extension of their own powers, without any definite or clear-cut arrangement looking either to improved laws or to State control. Nothing is mentioned in the statements Mr. Knowles has made of the purposes of the so-called Water Conservation Association, as to survey, mapping, the control of rates, or anything of that sort. There are vague generalities as to proper supervision, but very definite actualities as to the desire of the corporations, for whom this effort seems to be proceeding, to obtain the right of eminent domain and to be able to combine and merge while retaining that right, as they may not now do."

"It is not unfair to say that there was no great publicity given to the formation of the association headed by Mr. Knowles, on July 6 last, and it is certain that very few, if any, persons participating have ever shown any interest, other than a professional interest, in the public welfare."

"Mr. Knowles is an able and competent engineer, and he is certainly well within his professional rights in making the effort now appearing. This effort, however, should not masquerade under any guise of conservation, for nothing has appeared in connection with it which can properly be called conservation."

"The fourth and fifth provisions in the 'Ten Commandments' adopted by the Pennsylvania Conservation Association outline a wise stand in connection with water powers in this State. I believe it is most unwise to go one step beyond these provisions."
